So far I've created the outline of my tutorial page and made it so you can tab through to each section. I added some examples of common mistakes and important tips in the HTML section. I added some general pointers to all the sections and provided an introduction on how to get started building an accessible webpage. I plan to add a few more specific examples to each section and add to the CSS and Javascript to create an easy-to-follow and good-looking website. I want to demonstrate how you can make a dynamic, interactive, and interesting website while also making it screen-reader accessible. I think the section I may have the most trouble with is the Javascript section and creating dynamic elements with JS.
